Listen to the following paragraph and answer the questions.

Search and rescue dogs are specially trained animals that help locate missing people in difficult situations. They are often used after natural disasters such as earthquakes, avalanches, and floods, where survivors may be trapped or hidden in hard-to-reach areas. These dogs have an excellent sense of smell, allowing them to detect human scent from a great distance or beneath rubble. Training for these dogs is intense and begins at a young age. They learn to follow scents, ignore distractions, and respond quickly to commands from their handlers. Different breeds can be used, but energetic and intelligent dogs such as German Shepherds and Labrador Retrievers are especially common. Working closely with human teams, these dogs can cover large areas quickly and save valuable time. Their skills often make the difference between life and death in emergency rescue operations.
