Writing tools have changed continuously and gotten better as humans have progressed. First, there were the paints used by our early-history relatives __48__ Then, in 1938, a frustrated Hungarian immigrant and writer named László Bíró created the ballpoint pen.

__49__ Bíró, however, was the only one to claim success. One day, Bíró was watching young children playing with marbles. As he watched, a marble rolled through some water and left a line of water on the dry street. At that moment, Bíró had an epiphany. He would construct a small ball at the tip of a pen, which would roll out ink onto paper. Bíró's brother helped by creating a thick and quick-drying ink that could stick to the pen's circular tip. __50__

Bíró manufactured and sold his pen in Argentina. Unfortunately, he did not find fame elsewhere.__51__ He made some minor changes to Bíró's original design and began selling the pens in the U.S. They were expensive, but people still desired them.

Since the 1940s, the expense of producing ballpoint pens has gone down. Even in the current digital age, we continue to produce two billion of them each year. It's interesting to think that one of the greatest writing tools we have today got its start with a children's game of marbles.

(A) It was a man named Milton Reynolds who was able to achieve that.

(B) There had been many creative attempts at reforming the fountain pen.

(C) Together, they'd found a way to make it work without resistance, and with ease and efficiency.

(D) Next came the fountain pens in 1827, which could barely contain the ink and often made a mess.

Pizza holds a special place in the hearts of many Americans. According to some estimates, the average American will eat a surprising 600 slices in their lifetime. Despite their love for pizza, Americans have strong opinions on the subject. One raging debate is over which is better: New York or Chicago?

New York-style pizza was likely invented in 1905 by two Italians who opened a restaurant in New York City. For more than 40 years, New York-style pizza had no competitors. However, all that changed in 1943 when two men opened Pizzeria Uno in Chicago and sold Chicago-style pizza, or deep-dish pizza. New York-style pizza has a flat, thin base with crispy edges, while Chicago-style pizza has a thick crust with edges that are up to three inches high. People who favor New York-style pizza praise its convenience. They say you can eat a slice as you walk. In contrast, to eat Chicago-style pizza, you need a knife and a fork. Lovers of Chicago-style pizza claim their pizza is more filling and the deep-dish crust allows more flavors to be packed in.

52. What do many people argue over regarding pizza, according to the passage?

(A) When New York-style pizza was invented.

(B) Where the first pizza in the United States appeared.

(C) How many slices of pizza an American eats each year.

(D) Whether New York-style or Chicago-style pizza is better.

53. What clearly sets New York-style pizza apart from Chicago-style pizza, based on the passage?
(A) The cooking method.
(B) The size of the pizza.
(C) The thickness of the crust.
(D) The popularity of the pizza.

54. What claim do lovers of Chicago-style pizza make?
(A) It is less filling than New York-style pizza
(B) It is easier to eat than New York-style pizza.
(C) Its crust allows for a greater variety of tastes.
(D) It is a healthier choice than New York-style pizza.

Anne Frank was born into a Jewish family in Germany in 1929 during a time when the country was troubled. Many people had lost their jobs and were becoming poorer and Adolf Hitler – the leader of the Nazi party –blamed Jews for Germany's problems.

When World War II broke out, life for Anne and her family became much harder. The Nazis imposed strict rules on Jews, restricting the places they could visit, the shops they could use and even the schools they went to.

In 1942, afraid for their safety, Anne and her family went into hiding at Prinsengracht 263, which Otto Frank and his helpers had set up the hiding place several months previously. The hiding place was in the backhouse of the company which belonged to Anne's father. Anne later named it the 'Secret Annex'. The entrance to the Annex was hidden behind a bookcase.

While in hiding, Anne kept a diary in which she recorded her fears, hopes, and how she longed to go outside. She also wrote about everyday events in her diary; things that probably didn't seem that important at the time, but that have helped us form a picture of what life was like during this incredibly difficult time in history.

On 4th August 1944, the Nazis raided the Prinsengracht 263 and found their hiding place. They took the 8 people in hiding to concentration camps. Due to the poor conditions at the camp Bergen-Belsen, Anne and her sister both died in February 1945 — just a few months before the end of World War II.
