The benefits of spending time among the trees, known as forest bathing, have been shown to improve mental and physical health. __48__ These simulations lead to physiological reactions similar to those observed when a person is actually in a genuine forest.

Forest bathing with VR technology offers many advantages. It helps boost cognitive function, strengthen the immune system, and regulate blood pressure, while also relieving stress, anxiety, and feelings of fatigue. Moreover, VR technology presents a particularly valuable tool for individuals who lack access to natural environments due to physical limitations or for those who live in urban landscapes far away from nature. __49__ The experience can be customized to suit individual preferences. As well, users can enhance their virtual environment with audio recordings of nature and even include elements such as virtual photography or virtual fitness programs within the simulated forest.

The science behind the positive effects of forest bathing, whether real or virtual, is still being explored. __50__ Others point to the concept of "attention restoration theory," which proposes that natural environments like forests provide us with an opportunity to recover from the difficult demands of daily life. There is ongoing research to investigate these and other theories surrounding the benefits of forest bathing.

Over 50% of the world's population now live in urban centers. Therefore, virtual forest bathing might be the key to providing many with a much-needed connection to the natural world. __51__ This technology has huge potential for development and promises to play a significant role in shaping our future well-being.

(A) This is especially true because that connection may become increasingly scarce.
(B) For those who step into a VR nature experience, it is like being transported to another world.
(C) Some scientists believe that humans, as part of the natural world, have a basic need to interact with nature.
(D) Now, researchers are exploring the use of virtual reality (VR) technology to produce the experience of being in a forest.

第 52 至 55 題為題組

When it comes to gender equality, Scandinavia is often praised for leading the way toward greater equality between women and men. The Nordic countries—Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, and Iceland—are indeed vanguards in promoting female representation in political institutions. Take Denmark, Iceland, and Finland, for example.

Denmark
From 1990 to 2019, the proportion of women in the Danish parliament showed fluctuation but overall growth. The lowest representation was in 1990 and 1994, with women holding 33.7% of parliamentary seats. The highest female representation occurred in 2011 and 2019, at 39.1%. Among the Nordic countries, Denmark used to be the only country that never exceeded 40% female representation in parliament before 2019. Generally, the share of female candidates in the parliamentary elections has been significantly lower than the share of men. However, after the parliamentary election in 2022, the share increased to 44%, the highest in history.

Iceland
Despite being the first country in the world to enforce equal pay for men and women, Iceland still experiences a significant gender pay gap. In the year when the equal pay law was introduced, the gender pay gap favoring men was highest among directors and chief executives. With continuous efforts, Iceland is the most gender-equal country in the world for the 14th consecutive year in the World Economic Forum (WEF) Report released in 2023 and the only country to have closed more than 90% of its gender gap.

Finland

After Finland's 2023 election, 92 of the 200 representatives in its parliament were female. This was the second largest share of women in parliament in Europe, a ranking led by Sweden. Furthermore, Finland is also distinguished for being the first European country to grant women the right to vote and run for office, and the first to have granted universal suffrage. This means that any citizen aged 18 or older, regardless of race, religion, or sex, has the right to vote in elections.

52. Which of the following charts correctly shows the proportion of women in Denmark's parliament from 1990 to 2019?

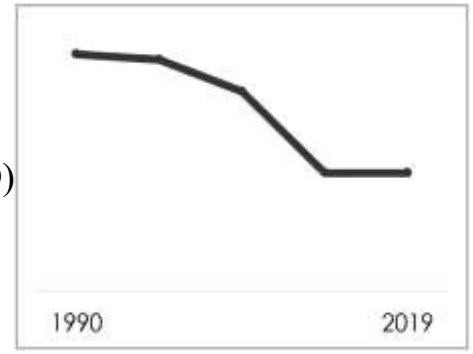
(D)



53. Which of the following statement is NOT TRUE?

(A) Denmark has consistently had over 40% female representation in its parliament since 1990.

(B) Iceland still experiences a significant gender pay gap despite enforcing equal pay for men and women.

(C) Finland was the first European country to grant women the right to vote and run for office.

(D) By 2023, Iceland has closed more than 90% of its gender gap according to the World Economic Forum Report.

54. According to the passage, which country has the largest share of women in parliament in Europe?
(A) Denmark (B) Iceland (C) Finland (D) Sweden

55. What does "universal suffrage" mean in the context?
(A) All citizens have the right to run for election.
(B) Only women have the right to vote and run for election.
(C) All citizens who fulfill the age requirement have the right to vote.
(D) Only citizens who own property have the right to vote.

VII. 混合題: 9% (含選擇題 4 分及非選 5 分)

本部份共一題組，第 56 題為複選題、第 57 題為填空題、第 58-59 題為簡答題，選擇題請按題號劃卡，填空和簡答題請依提示寫在答案卷上。

第 56-59 為題組

Many people have vision problems. Across the world, approximately 64% of adults require glasses to improve their vision. In some parts of Asia, this number is even higher, nearing 90%. One theory proposed by experts suggests a historical explanation for this trend: ancient Chinese wars. Centuries ago in China, many of the physically largest and strongest men were sent to war, leaving behind smaller individuals with inferior vision in the villages. As a result, more Asians tend to have poor vision.

However, vision issues extend beyond poor vision to include conditions like face blindness. It occurs when people can see normally but have difficulty recognizing anyone's facial features. They cannot tell people apart, figure out who strangers are, or even know what their own face looks like. Additionally, those with face blindness may struggle to detect emotions or understand how old someone is or what gender they are.

Face blindness is a cognitive disorder and various factors can contribute to its development. It can be inherited and may run in families. Aside from genetic factors, it can result from brain trauma, such as head injury or stroke. Furthermore, face blindness seems to be quite common among individuals with autism. For people with face blindness, their lives can be affected negatively. For instance, they may have a hard time with directions. They may also find it hard to form close bonds with friends because they cannot recognize them or read the emotions on their faces.

Similar to those who are deaf or blind, people with face blindness develop ways to reduce the impact of their condition. To figure out who someone is, they memorize people's height, hair, voice, or even how people walk. Another way to help is to make sure all friends and family members know about the problems. That way, they can help people with face blindness navigate social situations better.

56. From (A) to (F) below, choose the ONES that are true about face blindness.（多選題，4%）
(A) It involves difficulty in distinguishing different faces.
(B) People with the disorder can only read their own facial expressions.
(C) It does not affect the patient's ability to develop friendships with others.
(D) It sometimes occurs due to brain damage, but some people are born with it.
(E) There are currently hardly any strategies for those with the disorder to cope with life.
(F) The fact that many strong Asian men fought in wars may be the reason why Asians have higher rates of the disorder.

57. 請從文章中找出最適當的單詞（word）填入下列句子空格中，並視句型結構需要做適當的字形變化，使句子語意完整、語法正確，並符合全文文意。限填一個單詞（word）。(填充，1%)
Vision problems are a widespread issue globally, with around 64% of adults _____ glasses to see clearly. This figure sharply increases in certain Asian regions, where up to 90% of adults may need corrective lenses.
