The topic that has been on many athletes' minds for quite some time is __43__ to get a leg up on the competition with performance-enhancing drugs (PEDs) or not. It's seen as cheating by most. However, is that really the case if everyone else is already taking them?

The case that __44__ this widespread problem __44__ was most likely the one involving Ben Johnson, who not only won the men's 100-meter dash at the 1988 Summer Olympics, but also broke the world record. It wasn't long, though, that race officials found evidence of PEDs in Johnson's mandatory drug tests and subsequently __45__ him __45__ his gold medal. Ironically, Carl Lewis and Christie, second- and third-place finishers also tested for PEDs later on in their careers.

The cycling community as well as the entire sporting world was rocked when Lance Armstrong __46__ about using PEDs in 2013. The seven-time Tour de France winner, who had famously beaten cancer, was the __47__ person in the world people would have suspected of cheating. With climate change affecting weather patterns around the globe, intense conditions have become more common. One example of this is the increased number of droughts. While droughts cause many problems, sometimes these natural __48__ have interesting consequences. Such an unusual accidental result occurred in a small Spanish village called Aceredo, near the Portuguese border. In 1992, the government of Portugal __49__ plans to flood the valley behind the Alto Lindoso Dam located near Aceredo despite __50__ from residents. This was done in order to create a reservoir. This water was to serve as a __51__ source for the surrounding region.

When the people of Aceredo __52__ the area, they thought they would never see their small village again. However, a drought that had been __53__ the region since November 2021 gave the villagers a chance to view the village again. The lack of water meant levels in the Alto Lindoso Reservoir dropped to 15 percent of its __54__. This change brought both tourists and former residents of Aceredo back to look at the area that has appeared once again.

These people saw how droughts __55__ by climate change are having an impact. On the dry ground were broken homes and boxes of old glass beer bottles __56__ outside cafés. There were also abandoned vehicles that were slowly __57__. It must have been a very strange experience for those people who had to leave Aceredo in the early 1990s to see it like that.

Thanks to search engines like Google, the Internet is a great way to find information. It's far from perfect, though, much to people's disappointment. There are a few simple tips that people could benefit from when using Google to find the information they are looking for. __58__ This helps the search engine make a better guess regarding what you want. In other words, it filters out information that you are not interested in. __59__ So, if you type "roses" "sunflowers" love poems into the search engine, you are more likely to find content with both roses and sunflowers in them because you used quotation marks.

On the other hand, using a hyphen (-) next to a word informs Google to ignore certain words in its searches. __60__ For example, typing in the phrase Paris landmarks -Louvre will get you a list of famous sites in that European city aside from the Louvre museum.

Another tip is to use an asterisk for missing words. __61__ Let's say if you want to find a famous expression but you forget one or more words. You can simply replace the word or words you can't recall with an asterisk. It also helps when you are trying to pull up song lyrics. Give these tips a try the next time you use Google!

(A) It's the opposite of using quotation marks.

(B) As a result, Google is more likely to find relevant results for you.

(C) This works well if you are searching for a particular quote or phrase.

(D) One good way to search for information effectively is to use quotation marks (" ") for essential text.

Rappers are often seen as cool by teenagers. One rapper named Logic took his career to the next level with his song, "1-800-273-8255." This song, released in April, 2017, is a collaboration with Alessia Cara and Khalid, both amazing artists in their own right. Logic sings, "I don't wanna be alive," while Cara responds that there is light in the darkest things. This song really struck a nerve with people who were depressed. The song's title is the phone number for the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. In 2017, the song peaked at number three in the US charts and received Grammy nominations the following year. In addition, calls to the number increased by 27 percent in the three weeks after its release. That means that he helped a lot of people who were thinking about killing themselves get the support they needed, and that is truly remarkable.

Logic performed the song at the MTV Video Music Awards in August, 2017. After the performance, the suicide prevention hotline saw a 50 percent surge in the number of calls. He also did a performance of it at the Grammys the next year. And again, calls to the lifeline also increased. A medical journal studied teen suicide after these performances and found some amazing statistics—245 lives were saved because of this song. Logic is a good rapper, but being a hip-hop artist who saves lives with his lyrics and writes songs that cause people to rethink their depression is amazing.

Please read the questions and choose the best answer for each question after you hear the short passage.

Please read the questions.

Please listen to the following passage.

Since its invention, Tetris has been one of the most popular video games in the world. However, many young people might be surprised to learn that the game was first released in 1984. A Russian software engineer created the game's first installment. Many think the name of the game comes from Russian, but it is actually a combination of the Greek prefix "tetra," meaning four, and the creator's favorite sport, tennis. The images of the original game screen included a simple collection of white periods, exclamation points, and square brackets on a black background. The most well-known version of Tetris was released on Nintendo's handheld Game Boy console back in 1989. Newer versions of the game, such as Tetris Blitz, are commonly seen on smartphones. Despite all the updates, the basic concept of Tetris remains the same. (6/6)

C 10. Where does the name "Tetris" come from?
(A) It is a popular word spoken in Russia.
(B) It was created by the Nintendo company.
(C) It is a combination of a Greek prefix and tennis.
(D) It was named after a computer software program.

B 11. Which of the following punctuation marks was NOT used in the first version of Tetris?
(A) The period.
(B) The comma.
(C) The square bracket.
(D) The exclamation point.

D 12. What version of Tetris is most well-known?

(A) Tetris Blitz.

(B) The original game for computers.

(C) The version invented in the 1999.

(D) The one on a Nintendo Game Boy.
